The case was then remanded till Saturday seized to fire off its guns close to Cape d'Aguilar; and but for the lighthouse being erected there, they would probably have been right in their calculations. There is, however, a very simple remedy which might be adopted, and which would in all likelihood prove effective. If the Chinese are active with their "rovenue cruisers," we should be equally active with a few "anti-revenue "critisers"—that is, we should have a few suit able launches to cruise about the vicinity of the Island, and take cognisance of what is The defendant called on others to beat the on enquiry beard the deceased had been knock. sweepstakes of $1,000 has been subscribed to take some systematic steps to provide herself novelty to those who had confined the Dutch Government of the Republic must be entrustgoing on. The whole matter was, however, so badly managed and carried out that the vessel was little suited for the purpose for clothing valued three cents, which had been ceused, and thought it was through running which she was designed, or at least was de- stolen from him with other property and money against something, whilst staggering. He did clared to be designed—that of keeping up a general surveillance over the Harbour and a Chipaman who found them on the hill the waters around, the island. If, however, this object were effected, there can be no question that it would go some way towards bringing the "revenue craisers" to order. At least, it would prevent such an affair as that of the Cape d'Aguilar junk, as the worthies employed by the Salt Commissioner or other functionary at Canton would be certain to have a wholesome dread of being caught at their work, even though their fear of punishment will be much diminished by the result of the recent case.

It would not be necessary to have any very expensive craft to accomplish all that is Defendant was told that there must be a necessary, the chief business being in fact reason. However, as be was not up before him that of keeping a good look out, and letting the Mandarin junk gentry know that they are watched. It is, we presume, in order to gain confirmation to this doctrine that the Oustoms steamer has been sent down to survey the Flats. We hope the result will be that they will discover, what we are assured by Pilots and others is the fact, that it is not so much absolute want of water that obstructs the crossing of the Flats, as 23 feet of

> of wind or tide; but the channel is so shifting and infriente, and so little aided by bnoys or other sailing marks, that it is next to impracticable after dark. But there is no such thing at the Flats as a vessel being detained three or four days, waiting for water, as is often the case at Woosung. Obviously, the plan would be to dredge the Woosung Bar first, and buoy the channel over the Flats. It is reassuring to learn that in spite of the unfavorable tone of the Viceregal report, the Foreign Ministers have resolved to persist in their represontations on the applect to the Tsungli-yamen.

No one of the sailors who: according to his own account, were rescued Navy, and pudding-shop proprietor of Shadwell, with him, no one of the crew from the vessel that rescued them came forward to support steward of the good ship Osprey, with his cerhis story; nor was any record or even trace tricate, signed by two Members of Enricement, of the good ship Caprey to be found either to testify that "through all his life." he had at Melbourne or in America. Accordingly, borne himself as "a man entitled to confidence when Arthur Orton had to take his trial. and respect."

for corrupt and wilful perjury, it was felt by those who surrounded, advised, and supported him that evidence was imperatively needed to bridge over this otherwise fatal gap. adventurers and speculators, who had a direct pecuniary interest in the success of his abominable fraud, is, unfortunately, matter of notoriety. These men, whoever they were, were evidently not over-scrupulous. Money there was, to a certain extent; and in no way Bort of ovidence of the Osproy's existence and the rescue of the Bella's crew. Could a genuine surprise be effected—could an Osprey man be "sprung upon" the jury so suddenly as to give no time to inquire into his antecedents, or to sift his story—oll might go well, even at the eleventh hour, and the "financing" of "Sir-Roger" might still prove to be a more profitable speculation than it had looked when Lord Chief-Justice Bovill signed the warrant for Arthur Orton's committal, The evidence given by "Jean Luie" and Captain Brown must still be fresh in the memory of our readers. Indeed, few are likely to have forgotten how the evidence of the conviet Lundgren took almost all England by surprise, and " Como esta Luic?" will probably boldly into the box, Lundgren swore that he China Ware, and 57 pkgs. Brizils they sighted an open boat, in which, with one or two other men, was a young Englishman who called himself "Mr. Rogers;" that i that same young Englishman he, Luie, saw again before him, and recognised, in the person of the Claimant to the Tichborne estates; that the Osprey in due course arrived at On Bombay.—Bank, 3 days' sight 229 Melbourne; and that there "Mr. Rogers" was On Calourra, -Bank, 3 days sight 229 landed. Such were, in effect, the outlines of Jean ON SHANGHAL. Luie's narrative, although it was given with an accuracy of detail that was almost marvellous. Not a point in the original story of his rescue, as told by Arthur Orton, was forgotten or missed. Nor was the steward of the Osprey allowed to stand unsupported and alone. Captain Brown swore that he had seen Luie at Rio, whence the Osprey had sailed for New York before her memorable voyage for Melbourne, and that he remembered Luie as the Osprey's steward; while the "perjured proprie. | Hongkong, Canton and Macso Steamboat Co.'s tor of the pudding shop "-to use Mr. Hawkins's quaint alliteration—further swore that the man Arthur Orton was none other than the Roger Tichborne who was at Rio in 1854, and whom he, Captain Brown, had atowed away in the Bella, on the morning on which that vessel left Rio, with every soul on board her hopelessly drunk. Here, then, was a compact mass of evidence admirably and effectively welded together. ' Luie swears to Brown, and Brown to Luie, and each swears to Arthur Orton as the very Roger Tichborne who was stowed away in the Bella, picked up by the Osprey, tended by Jean Luie, the Osprey's stoward, and safely landed in Australia. We now know that the story told by these two men was, from beginning to end, utterly false; that, as Mr. Justice Brett said, "it was suggested to Luie, or it came into his head," that he should swear he had been a sailor on board the Osprey, and had picked up the defendant, Arthur Orton; and that it was similarly suggested to Brown, or came into his head, to swear that he remembered Arthur Orton as the Roger Tichborne who left Rio in the Bella. It is difficult to imagine perjury more currupt or more devoid of any extenuating circumstance. Pity may perhaps, as the learned Judge pointed out, be extended to a witness who, when suddenly asked upon his oath a painful equestion Chew-foong to travelling trader. with reference to his past life, denies the charge which is implied. But pity is altogether out of place when a man deliberately learns by heart a long story, every word of which he knows to be false, and then insults and outrages justice by repeating it upon bis oath, with the direct intention of frustrating and defeating justice. Rightly considered, wilful and deliberate perjury committed in a Court of Law is an offence which deserves scant measure of mercy. In the present case it pre-against the man Lundgren, Mr. Justice Brett pointedly observed that there had been persons about Arthur Orton who had acted in such a way as to tempt Lundgren, to the perjuries remark was, it was yet fully justified by the facts one of the case, and it was as applicable to Captain Brown of the Brazilian Navy as to Jean Luie, staward of the Osprey. Luis himself, it may be remembered, stated to the officer by whom he was arrested that he should never have done what he did if he not been "made up to do it" by other people. The jury must not, Mr. Justice Brett pointed out, too readily accept and a statement as true. But, if it were true conspiracy had been at work, and the prisoners Lundgren and Brown were not the only persons who ought to be upon their trial. That ! both Brown and Lundgren were—to use the phrase of the latter-"made up" to perjure themselves as they did, is scarcely open to doubt. Those who will take the trouble to refer back to the records of "Regina v. Castro" can hardly avoid the conclusion that the tale Queen's Bench was carefully and claborately CHINA, JAPAN, the PHILIPPINES, and It comprises upwards of two thousand large prepared, point by point and detail by detail, the STRAITS. And birds that fwitter of the coming night, Calling their mates, boneath my cottage caves,-These Fute bath granted for a little space. To be companions of my pilgrimage, Filling my grateful heart with Nature's grace.

Not unremembered here the garish stage, Nor the wild city's uproar, nor the race For gain and power in which we all engago; Builere romembered dimly, in a dream, As samething fretful that hath consed to fret .-Here, where time lanses like a gentle stream, Hid in the woodland's heart, and I forget To note its music and its silver gleam.

But nover, never let me cease to know, Oh, whispering woods and daisy-sprinkled grass, The beauty and the peace that you bestow, When the wild fevers of ambition pass," And the worn spirit, in its gloom and grief, Sinks on your bosom, and there finds relief.

ANECDOTES OF TRAVEL IN PORTU

It is notorious to all travellers by sea, how dull their shipmates become after a day or two. Dam, the American, acutely remarks that it is the having to go without their daily dose of newspaper reading which makes ocean-going travellers so little entertaining as companions; and the fact is sadly suggestive of a general poverty of ideas. Dana is speaking of American or English travellers; foreigners, who seldom read newson board ship. It is a fact, however, that a passengers, even in a long voyage, I once travelled by a large steamer, the captain of which had spent half a lifetime in conveying passengers of various nationalities, chiefly Brazilians and Portuguese. It was the first time I had encountered individuals of either nation, and I was curious. "What sort-of people do you find them?" I asked the captain, one day, as we paced the quarterdeck together. "Well, sir," he answered "thoy're a queer lot, and that's the truth of it!" "How so?" "For one thing," said the captain, "they all of them, man woman, and child, squeeze their feet into boots that it gives a man the cramp to look at," "And what besides?"
